BOW WOW

Handwritten text in purple ink, possibly a signature or date, located in the upper right quadrant of the page.

After 300 YEARS

WOOD is still the favorite of Home Builders

Forests provided materials for the rude huts of the first colonists and the log cabins of west-moving pioneers. As America's forest industries grew, the woodlands furnished material for classic mansions, picturesque town houses and attractive cottages. The abundance of our forests gave the world a new architecture. After 300 years, many descendants of these pioneer builders are still living in these houses. Today's builders are converting the produce of our forests into modern homes of charm and utility unmatched elsewhere in the world today.

So that tomorrow's generations may enjoy the advantages of an adequate supply of wood, America's forest products industries stress the fact that trees are a crop. By managing our lands as we do to grow corn or cotton, we may enjoy an abundance of wood—forever.

Because of his interest in our school we strive to make it better.

Because of his interest in our accomplishments and achievements, we endeavor to reach higher.

Because of his example we are inspired to become better citizens.

Because of the conscientious manner in which he has served us by helping to provide a more agreeable surrounding in which to do our work, we have a better school which we are proud to represent.

Because of his interest in us as people we are honored.

We dedicate this yearbook to a man we are proud to know.

It is our fondest and most sincere wish that, when you look back over the years, this Yearbook will remind you of the twelve pages of the history of your life spent at Forest Hill High School.

We hope that you enjoy this Yearbook as much as we enjoyed putting it together.

Sincerely,

THE ANNUAL STAFF

The Annual Staff and Mr. White are to be congratulated on the excellent job that has been done on the Annual.

This book shows the students, teachers, honors, events, activities, individuals, and firms that make it possible.

We are justly proud of the annual and in the years ahead much pleasure may be derived from the memories it will invoke.

After 300 YEARS

WOOD is still the favorite of Home Builders

Forests provided materials for the rude huts of the first colonists and the log cabins of west-moving pioneers. As America's forest industries grew, the woodlands furnished material for classic mansions, picturesque town houses and attractive cottages. The abundance of our forests gave the world a new architecture. After 300 years, many descendants of these pioneer builders are still living in these houses. Today's builders are converting the produce of our forests into modern homes of charm and utility unmatched elsewhere in the world today.

So that tomorrow's generations may enjoy the advantages of an adequate supply of wood, America's forest products industries stress the fact that trees are a crop. By managing our lands as we do to grow corn or cotton, we may enjoy an abundance of wood—forever.
